Hatchet Rated High Among Newspapers By College Group

Wins Second Place for News
Pages; Beaten by "Pitt
News"

The University Hatchet was awarded "distinguished recognition" or second honors for best news pages at the spring convention of the Intercollegiate Newspaper Association held at Muhlenberg College last week.

University of Pittsburgh's Pitt News received first honors in the news department, and the Brooklyn Polytechnic won third place.

This was the first time George Washington's paper has received such recognition in the Intercollegiate Association, of which The Hatchet is a member. The Hatchet did not send a representative to the recent convention.

For the third year in succession The Brown and White of Lehigh University was awarded the cup for editorial distinction. The Westminster Herald and the Bucknellian received second and third honors, respectively, in this department.

Johns Hopkins University was chosen as the place for the next convention of the association, which will be held in the fall of this year.

Last Year The Hatchet was chosen as one of the ten best college newspapers.

University Doctors Attend Federation

Interesting Research Reports
Delivered by George
Washington Doctors

Reports of progress in research problems were presented by members of the George Washington Medical School faculty at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Dr. Vincent Du Vigneaud presented a paper on the chemical properties of higher purified preparation of pitressin and pitocin. Both these substances are used clinically in surgical and obstetrical work.

Drs. Hamilton, Brewer and Brotzman, of the Physiology Department, demonstrated a new device for measuring and recording blood pressure.

Dr. Leese and Dr. Roberts presented a paper describing the effect of the drug, bulboocapnine, on the tone of the voluntary muscles, a study said to be of considerable theoretical importance. Dr. Leese also presented work, completed at Harvard, on the velocity of afferent nerve impulses in the central nervous system.

Professor Elliot R. Clark, of the University of Pennsylvania, showed an interesting film explaining the spontaneous contractions and relaxations of the small blood vessels of the skin.

The next meeting of the Federation occurs in Columbia University in the spring of 1934, at which George Washington University will be represented.

UNIVERSITY'S RAZZ SHEETS HAVE PASSED INTO OBLIVION

Razz sheets have passed from the George Washington campus. Last week Gamma Eta Zeta, women's journalistic sorority, voted to cease future publication of its annual "Petticoat." Pi Delta Epsilon, men's journalistic fraternity, took similar action a year ago, abolishing the "Razberry." The "Ghost," a monthly magazine, has been in the grave for four years.

Such publications each year raise a question as to whether or not the few minutes' fun they provide are worth the very bad impression created among the many non-University readers which they are bound to reach. The editors are surprised at the circulation the paper attains and shocked at the false and libelous impression created. They decide that such publications are not fair to the University and that "maybe" they shouldn't be published.

The editors of this year's "Petticoat" were made to realize that if they did not take immediate action in striking out the word "maybe" and passing a ban now, a new group would make the same mistake next year. Their decision last week makes future indiscretion impossible.

With the "Petticoat" and "Razberry" in the grave beside the "Ghost," there is but one member of the family among us, and "he" is even now very ill. "Chips," The Hatchet weekly column, has been removed this issue in the belief that its character has been damaged by the bad name of the family.

THE FOOTBALL TEAM AND ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT?

Balancing the football team and the classroom seemed to be a paramount problem among many George Washington students last fall. Some of the more serious-minded felt that the real purpose of the University was being sacrificed for a good football team and its aftermath—collegiate enthusiasm.

"Are we to forget the primary purpose of the University? Will the football team's ability to beat Iowa bring the kind of students the University wants?" These were the questions asked by critical ones in numerous letters to the editor of The Hatchet.

Oddly enough, it cannot be denied that the reputation of the football team has played a very important part in building many of the greatest universities in the country and at the same time has not impaired their standing in other fields. Think of the institutions you consider the country's greatest and then look up their athletic record. It will be just as outstanding. It appears then, not to be a question of curtailing athletic activities, but being careful not to neglect other fields.

Without going into the details of administrative plans, let us review some of the other ways in which the University has been or will be publicized during the current year. The Glee Club sang in a country-wide broadcast at the lighting of the National Christmas Tree; the Junior Prom will be broadcast over a national hook-up; eighteen lectures by University professors are being broadcast by radio; Dr. Marvin made a trip across the country and visited nine alumni clubs; an alumni magazine is being planned; alumni homecoming has become an annual affair; a publicity department is maintained from which two hundred and fifty newspapers and press associations receive releases of what is happening at the University; the University Medical Society and graduate clinic, the summer sessions, the sociology department's conference on unemployment relief and the University convocations attract national attention and editorial comment; the Law Review has won the praise of the foremost legal writers and authorities in the country; and the personal labors and achievements of Dr. Marvin and a long list of faculty members in the fields of research, authorship and foundation work have stamped George Washington University as of the great.

NEW EDITOR PAYS TRIBUTE TO FESLER, A LEADER

A new editor takes over the management of The Hatchet today, and C. Manley Fesler, who has been in charge for the past year, finds that his job is done. He probably feels regret that he cannot continue, such a feeling is shared by his staff.

Thousands of Hatchet readers know Fesler only by name, despite the fact that he is probably the best known and best-liked man on the campus. Yet they have received a large proportion of their feeling for the University, either one way or another, from him.

Strike Up The Band . .

JUST BETWEEN US

By LUDWIG CAMINITA

PROVOST WILLIAM ALLEN WILBUR will be feted next Saturday afternoon by the junior class and the entire University. The juniors have named their field day, which will be held in Rock Creek Park, "Dean" Wilbur Day.

Provost Wilbur needs no introduction, be it for his past accomplishments or for his present University work. It has been truly said that the "Dean" is the personification of George Washington University spirit and courage.

The student body may differ on points of discussion; day students and night students may find little in common save that they attend the same institution of higher learning. We do have something in common, however, in "Dean" Wilbur, and as a grateful student body we can do no more than attend "Dean" Wilbur Day—not for the glory of the junior class which sponsors the day, not to "honor" Dean Wilbur (for it is he who is honoring us), but as a demonstration of gratitude to one who has so long and so faithfully devoted his life to help you and me prepare for the struggle which is to come in later years.

THE LIBERAL CLUB is to be congratulated for its forward spirit in presenting such a distinguished speaker as Mr. Mauritz Halgreen, associate editor of The Nation, to George Washington students. As Washington correspondent of The Nation, Editor Halgreen should certainly have had something to say of interest to every student on campus.

The present conspicuous lack of interest on the campus in anything that even smacks of the intellectual is unfortunate. After all, Food Shop chatter, Library dates, and Dollar Dances may go towards making a rounded, socially fit person, but one's education will be little more than social, and of no credit to the University, if it stops just there. Let us have more speakers of Mr. Halgreen's calibre, but above all, let the student body show interest in these things. It was never a shameful thing to learn, and it's never too late to start.

"AN INTERESTING STUDY in Botanical Education," was Dr. Lawson Yocum's characterization of the flower show held by the botany department last week.

Seven out of approximately 120 of his botany students attended this flower show. Attendance being voluntary, Dr. Yocum finds it of some educational importance to note the marked lack of interest shown by students of botany in things botanical.

To me, this lack of interest indicates one of two things. First, the majority of students taking elementary botany are doing so because they "have" to take the course to fulfill their science requirements; or second, there is something wrong with the system of teaching botany, so much so that the students' interest in the subject is not aroused sufficiently to make them want to attend a flower show.

I feel that the first of the two is the real reason for the conspicuous absence of botany students at the flower show. The botany department certainly is presenting the course in as interesting a manner as it can. It dispenses with the high school custom of "you must do this and that" which so irks the average college student.

Hence, the root of the evil, if you please, lies in the manner by which the department enrolls many of its students. These students are not interested in botany, but take the course to "get off" their science requirement. Therefore, they do as little as possible in the field, and that unwillingly.

This University, in comparison with many others, has been especially liberal in permitting students to select their courses. It could go still further and permit them not only to select their major, but also to pursue any other courses they wish. It seems logical to assume that if one is interested in medicine, he will have an interest in sciences and so take up scientific courses. A major in English can certainly not be expected to enjoy sciences, if it isn't in him, so to speak, and it is just wasted time to compel him to do so.

A Faculty Editorial Mending Broken Personalities

BY FRED A. MOSS
Professor of Psychology

It is generally believed that hard times, such as we have been having for the past four years, are followed by a marked increase in insanity. Fortunately, such is not the case. People expect an increase in insanity with hard times because they do not understand that abnormal behavior is produced by definite physical causes.

It must be recognized that personality depends on the proper functioning of the body machine and that truly abnormal personalities are found only in abnormal bodies. The personality repair man is often hopelessly handicapped by his preconceived ideas, his mistaken belief that personality is a thing apart from the body, that it is something ethereal. A mysterious substance, that cannot be changed or corrected by improving the underlying bodily structures.

What little we know about mending broken personalities has been found out solely by materialistic methods. Take, for example, the most horrible of all mental disorders, general paresis. General paresis is caused by syphilitic infection of the brain. Until a very few years ago, it was attributed to all sorts of mental and emotional disturbances, business failure, the death of relatives, disappointment in love, or too much religious fervor. And in the past it was treated by the usual psychic methods with one hundred per cent bad results.

Only twenty-eight years ago it was demonstrated that a definite physical agent, the same germ that causes syphilis of the body, also caused this disease. It was demonstrated that these germs caused a definite damage to the brain tissue and thus produced the abnormal behavior. Later it was discovered that this disease could be detected by certain chemical analysis of the spinal fluid; and, about ten years ago, it was found that general paresis could be treated successfully by giving the patient malarial fever. Here is a so-called "mental disease" caused by a definite physical agent, which produces a definite physical brain pathology. It can be diagnosed by physical means and successfully treated by physical methods.

So much for the physical basis of this disease. When these germs invade the nervous system, profound mental and moral changes result. The energetic man becomes lazy; the vivacious, dull; the virtuous, dissolute; the miserly, extravagant; the timid, aggressive, and the truthful, false. Judgment wanes and absurd delusions and hallucinations constitute the mental life. The patient becomes boastful, says that he is Napoleon, and delights in telling of his wonderful powers and achievements. But by the use of the malarial treatment a large percentage of the patients can be restored to sanity and returned to society.

The combined Glee Clubs of George Washington University, under the direction of Dr. Robert H. Harmon and accompanied by Mrs. Harmon, presented their annual concert at the Willard Hotel last Tuesday evening.

Nils Falkman, tenor, assisted the club with two groups of solos, and the incidental solo work in Gounod's "Sanctus." The evening program was well arranged.

The first group, sung by the Men's Club, consisted of lighter numbers, and was marked by the presentation of Speicher's "The Merry Frogs." Its success was due in no small part to the remarkably clear enunciation of the men.

The Women's Club then sang its group of five songs. The last two of these, "The Belle" and Sullivan's "Cachuch and Finale," from The Gondoliers, were by far the best of this group. These light, fast-moving numbers seemed ideally suited to the voices and temperament of the women.

Following Mr. Falkman's second group, consisting of four songs, the Men's Club returned. The songs were of the type of music for which the club is famous—three sacred numbers sung in Latin, and an old English carol. With these, the club gave the audience a bit of the superb work which made it the national glee club champion a few seasons ago.

The program was closed with three outstanding numbers by the combined clubs. They were Gounod's "Sanctus," "Beautiful Savior," as arranged by Christiansen, and Rubenstein's "Kamenei Ostrov." Leon Brusiloff, with his concert orchestra, aided in making the closing number.

The concert was well attended.

Did You Know That . . .

This year marks the hundredth anniversary of baseball. Just 100 years ago this spring the Philadelphia Olympic Club was formed to play "town ball," from which grew, in the next half century, the big leagues and the modern game. Boston saw the first baseball organization, although New York early took the lead in its development. As played then, it resembled very closely the indoor baseball of the present. In 1857, nearly 60 clubs were in the field, a national association of baseball players was formed and rules, the most important of which was to divide the game into nine innings, were written by Henry Chadwick, "father of baseball," then sports writer for the New York Clipper.

Dr. William A. White, professor of psychiatry in the Medical School of George Washington University, has published this month a book describing his forty years in this field of the study of the mind.

ROBERT P. HERZOG

A rip-sportin' good time is in store for the participants in the first annual "Dean" Wilbur Day sponsored by the class of '34. Saturday afternoon, May 13, is dedicated to the Junior Class, and when I say dedicated I mean devoted, depicted, and denoted as the biggest outdoor social and athletic event of the season.

Manager Johnny Everett, formerly of the McNary-Everett's, is in charge of the free-for-all. Marbles, horseshoes, baseball, tennis, doughnut-dunking and track events will be held. Newell Lushy, dainty Kappa Sig, is outstanding among the marble champions in the 365-pound event.

Cauliflower ears will be carefully washed; black eyes handled with the customary raw beef; skinned noses will be mindfully powdered, and tender shins will have time to reflect as a crowd of hard-boiled, pug-nosed, prize-fighters meet at the swanky Troika for the first annual banquet of the Squared Circle. Arrangements were completed by Chairman Zuzu Stewart, of the campus-kissers social committee.

The baseball games last week were glorified monuments to one man. Otis Zahn garnered enough hits in the two nights to win the average ball game—but Jimmy Howell's pitching was about as effective as a cheesecloth umbrella would have been on a day like yesterday—and speaking of eleven—Bill Albert, blond sophomore shortstop, let enough balls slip through his fingers to keep a sandlot club supplied for a whole season.

Wake Forest managed to accumulate enough runs in one inning to get in a threatening position, but it wasn't until an enterprising Wake Forester shot a homer into deep left center in the ninth frame of the contest that the game was in the bag (the homer drove in two runs).

West Virginia U. went home unscathed. The Colonials handed them a 14-8 win—silver tray included. Our faces are really red—the coal miners scored ten runs in one stanza.

Errors were as plentiful as the proverbial Carter liver pill. Otis Zahn's three triples and a slew of bingles and singles from the same stick wielder colored an otherwise gray horizon.

The following headline graced the Easterner last week—NEW TENNIS COURTS ARE BEING BUILT—merely a suggestion.

Tennis Team Will Meet Sewanee U. Today at Columbia

Game Postponed Friday Because of Rain; Team Meets Johns Hopkins May 12

With the kind permission of an uncertain and in the past two months, most unfair weather man, the Colonial tennis team meets the Sewanee University racket wielders at the Columbia Country Club this afternoon. The aforesaid weather man prevented the scheduled meeting of these teams on Friday and if provoked in the slightest may repeat his squelching act today.

More provoking, in Baltimore April 15 when the Johns Hopkins netmen humbled George Washington 7-2 may result in a mighty unpleasant day for the Marylanders Friday when a return match is played at Columbia.

This is the only set-back G. W. has received to date with notable triumphs over St. Johns at Annapolis and Pittsburgh shining brightly on the credit side of the ledger. Revenge against Hopkins is uppermost in the minds of Farrington's proteges at present—except of course the incessant rain which may only serve to incite the home team to greater efforts.

To the gentle tune of a light pitter-patter on the "tin tabernacle" roof, Tom Frydell, Army and Navy Club pro, instructed the squad on the finer points of the game last Wednesday afternoon in an effort to spruce-up the play of the boys and give them an idea of how it's done by Tilden, Richards, Kozeluh & Co. Several more practice sessions will be held under Frydell's careful tutelage with particular stress on service, net play, and ground strokes.

Although subjecting his squad to the rigors of the pro's eye Farrington was more than satisfied with the play of the team in defeating Pitt in the Smoky City last week. This is the first time a George Washington net squad has beaten the Panthers, and the boys are inclined to feel quite airy over their success.

West Virginia And Wake Forest Beat Colonial Ball Team

Both Nines Stage Decisive Rallies to Score Triumphs Over Colonials

Forced to act the role of "mudders" in Griffith Stadium last week, the Colonial nightbirds were not as proficient as their guests and dropped two games. Wake Forest, who has lost only three games in four years, and defeated Michigan, Duke and North Carolina this season, outslugged Morris' proteges Wednesday night to grab a 17-14 decision, while West Virginia topped them the following evening, 14-8. Friday's scheduled game with the Mountaineers was rained out.

Broden, Wake Forest first sacker, put the game in the bag for the North Carolinians in Wednesday's battle with a ninth-inning home run with two on base. This blow coming with the count deadlocked at 14-all, gave the visitors their margin of victory, for Lefty Barnes, Deacon underhand ace, entered the struggle in the last half of the ninth, silencing the G. W. bats to a whisper.

It was a heart-breaking game for the Colonials to lose. Although outlived 16 to 12, George Washington held the upper hand until the seventh, when the Carolina boys repeated a first-round five-run rally and pushed ahead, 18-12. The home team retaliated with two runs in the eighth, tying the score, for Wake Forest had tallied once in the opening half of the inning.

With the appearance of Barnes, who effectively squelched G. W.'s final hope, the fans and critics began to understand how the winners fared so well in previous engagements. This laid walked two Colonial batters, but soon settled down to fan three men, retiring the side.

A big fifth inning in which they netted 10 runs gave West Virginia their victory over George Washington Thursday. Weingardner breezed along with a 4-3 advantage and seemed in fine fettle until this round. But the Mountaineers seemed to get vengeance aplenty in their spurge and easily bagged the contest. Scattered hits netted four more Colonial tallies, but the damage had been done.

Rain Again Stops Many Run-Offs In Intramural Sports

Rain retarded the second round of golf, horseshoes, and tennis intramural matches this week. Many pairings made from the winners of the initial rounds were not played.

Only three out of seven scheduled golf matches were played off. Baldwin defeated Levy, 4-8; L. Sherry beat Varila, 5-3; and Kolb eliminated R. Sherry, 2-1. Garber and Simmons, winners in the first round, waited for their opponents to advance from the first matches.

Despite the inclement weather, 13 horseshoe pitchers reached the third bracket by eliminating their opponents. The winners were: Cross, Hertler, Jewler, Lewis, Nansbaum, Neldorf, Trokinsky, Young, and Zahn.

Eleven matches were scheduled in the tennis singles, while only five were run off. The remaining six encounters were either delayed or postponed on account of the slow elimination in last week's contests. Those advancing to the third round were: Alper, Coakley (default), Mattare, Rollins, and Yap. In the doubles, there were seven matches. Only one was played, Christie and Varila failed to play because their opposing team had not been determined, while the other racquet encounters were delayed because of rain. This week's victor, the Sullivan-Coakley duo, eliminated Bauman and Greenburg.

Faculty-O.D.K. Game Is Athletic Feature Of Class Field Day

Profs Hoping to Avenge Last Year's Bad Defeat—Wise Money Silent

Interest in the athletic events of Junior Class Field Day (Dean Wilbur Day) is gradually centering on the annual Faculty-O. D. K. baseball game to be played at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the big day.

Advance rumors are to the effect that the faculty is counting on a victory to avenge the 15-4 setback suffered last year. The O. D. K.s, on the other hand, are confident of another victory. Impartial observers refuse to venture even an opinion on the outcome of the game.

The faculty will be without the services of Prof. Tillema, who hurried for the teachers in the two preceding games. Dr. Tillema has, however, consented to umpire the contest.

Bucky Herzog, who last year held the professors to eight scattered hits, one a home run by Prof. Cruickshanks, will again be on the mound for O. D. K.

Probable starting line-ups:

Morris' Nine Faces Marines Tonight: Two More Games

Meet Salem on Wednesday and Brooklyn College Friday; Special Attractions

Coach E. K. Morris' Colonial nine continues its baseball campaign this week with three games listed and special attractions for each night's contest having been completed by Publicity Director Jack Espey.

Tonight brings the Sixth Marine Reserve Brigade nine to Griffith Stadium to oppose Morris & Co., with a concert by the band of that organization under the leadership of Leon Brusloff. In addition the Hines Community Center will stage six amateur wrestling bouts under the direction of Jack Haas. The University band will play its second in a series of night concerts at this time.

The Salem College team invades the Nation's Capital tomorrow night, furnishing the opposition in the feature of the evening, while the official opening of the Capital City League, with Walter Johnson throwing out the first ball, is scheduled as the special attraction.

Friday night's arc engagement pits George Washington against the Brooklyn College aggregation and as special attraction Espey has arranged to run the preliminaries of the first annual playground relay carnival of the District. This meet is under the auspices of the Department of Playgrounds and the University Athletic Department, and has representatives of 23 municipal playgrounds competing in five weight classes.

Each of the nine engaging the Colonials this week has made its record of victories larger than its losses and should provide excellent competition. Friday's battle with Brooklyn College will put Morris' charges up against one of the best teams on their schedule. Boasting a slate of three triumphs and a single loss, the New Yorkers possess power in every department and a pitching and slugging star in Johnny Bittner.

Hurling 14 innings in three games this season, Bittner has let his opponents down with three hits and fanned 17 batters. When not pitching he plays in the outfield or second base and leads his mates in batting with an average around .450 to date.

Fenlon, Mulvey First Colonial Grads To Receive Letters in Three Sports

Stars Make History as They Grace Football and Basketball Teams; Advent of Baseball Provides Opportunity for Third Monogram

By "RED" HOYLE

The first time in the history of the school! Such will be the distinction held by John Fenlon and Fred Mulvey, two of the most versatile athletes in all Colonial athletic history when they receive their third varsity letter of the scholastic year at the end of the present baseball season. Fenlon and Mulvey have received letters in football and basketball already this year, and when their collegiate athletic careers close the last of May, will have earned their letters in baseball, making the first time that any athlete wearing Buff and Blue will have lettered in three major sports in any one year.

It is a significant fact that both of these star athletes are from regions far removed from the place called "home" by the usual run of Colonial lettermen. Fenlon hails from Cheboygan, Mich., and Mulvey says that all of the folks up in East Potomac, R. I., claim him for a native son.

Fenlon (Soapy to you!) has lettered at halfback on the grid team for the last three years, and played forward on the basketball court. Now that George Washington has renewed baseball as a major sport, he has been holding down the third base assignment, and is proving to be a sensation at the keystone position.

Colonial supporters will have no trouble recalling Soapy's feats on the gridiron, and many an ardent fan will remember for years to come the many thrills they enjoyed when Johnny started around an opposing end, or the brilliant return of some long punt.

Believe you me, Johnny was no slouch on the hardwoods; his accurate passing and clever floorwork was not often surpassed by any man on any opposing team. Fans who saw any of the basketball games this winter will recall his work, and have marveled at the way in which he covered the floor. Now Johnny is one of the leading hitters on the nine, and it is almost a certainty that he will be near the lead in hitting at the end of the season.

Mulvey, the pride and joy of Providence, has been one of the main cogs of Pixlee and Co., dealers in plain and fancy touchdowns, for the last three seasons. Fred has played a mighty steady game at an end position, and as a blocker, it is said that he has no equal among his cohorts. Fans as well as coaches will miss him next fall, and it will be a mighty tough job replacing him.

Mulvey also played a forward on the cage squad, and was a man of no mean ability. Although not of the flashy type, Fred played some good steady ball for the Colonials, and always delivered when called upon. With the coming of spring, Mr. Freddie stored his basketball togs in mothballs, and immediately reported for Coach Morris' baseball squad. He started the opening game, playing in the outfield.

Now it looks as if he will be a very tough man to oust from the starting line-up, for he has proved his mettle as a baseball player, and is living up to all expectations as a dependable man in the outer garden.

Contrary to possible misbeliefs, neither Fenlon or Mulvey is a large man. Fenlon is the short, muscular type, weighing in around 168 or 170 pounds when in condition. Fred Mulvey is just the opposite, being a tall, wiry chap who weighs 180 pounds when dripping wet. It is a nice consolation to all of us boys who do not hit the scales at 200 or above to note that what these men have done with their grit, determination, and love of athletics, surpassing many men who have outweighed them anywhere from 80 to 50 pounds.

Both of these stellar athletes receive their sheepskins in June, and it is with much regret that we will see them leave George Washington for the cruel world of coaching future athletic stars. So, hail to Soapy and Fred! May we have more of their type in the future.

THIS WEEK'S GAMES

LEAGUE A—P. S. K. vs. K. S.
S. A. E. vs. S. N.

LEAGUE B—D. T. D. vs. S. M. S.
Acacia vs. K. A.

Standing complications in League B of the interfraternity baseball series were partly cleared by the defeat of Sigma Phi Epsilon by Acacia, 4-2, breaking a three-way tie for the leadership.

Sigma Mu Sigma continued her share, however, by a victory over Kappa Alpha, 11-2, and remains on even terms with the Acacians.

Limiting Sig Ep batters to two hits, Helvestine chalked up 11 strike-outs, and personally accounted for two of his team's runs to play an enviable role in the Acacia win. Sherrill, opposing twirler, granted only 4 hits and fanned 8, but was handicapped by poor support. Hits by Helvestine and Elsberry, coupled with a walk, were responsible for the last Acacia score.

Score by innings:
S. P. E. 1 0 0 0 1 0-2
Acacia 0 1 2 0 1 x-4

Opportune hitting between numerous walks enabled Sigma Mu Sigma to score at will against Kappa Alpha in their 11-5 win. Hoffman, although granting only four hits, was often in hot water by his frequent free passes.

Earlier change of pitchers by K. A. might have rendered a different verdict, as Millard, relieving Knop in the sixth, completely stopped Sigma Mu scoring for the remainder of the game. K. A. scored three runs in the waning innings, but Hoffman bore down in the pinches to pull through.

Score by innings:
S. M. S. 2 2 1 3 3 0-11
K. A. 0 0 0 0 0 2-5

T. U. O. emerged from the cellar of League A by defeating Sigma Chi, 15-4.

Other scheduled games were either called or forfeited.

Squared Circle Will Hold Banquet Friday

Eats and officers will be the chief and howling concern of the Squared Circle, University boxing club, at its annual social affair this week.

Indigestions of the big cauliflower banquet, which is scheduled to be celebrated Friday, May 12, at 9:30 p. m., will no doubt be smoothed considerably by the strains of the gypsy orchestra at the Russian Troika Night Club.

After food will come the perhaps less interesting but equally important matter of the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The whole affair, under the capable chairmanship of Kermit (Zuzu) Stewart, promises to be a galloping success.

After College WHAT?

Harry D. Watts, V. P. of James Stewart & Co., Inc., builders of famous buildings throughout the world, says: "World progress depends upon engineering. No wonder eager college men look toward this profession. But to succeed you must have a technical background, ability to take the knocks, and alertness to take advantage of the breaks."

"ABILITY to take the knocks." And a yet brains count above all. That's why in engineering, as in college, a pipe is the favorite smoke. A pipeful of good old Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco clears the brain for those intensive problems that confront the engineer . . . or the college man.

Of course most college men know Edgeworth. They like its distinctive flavor that comes only from this blend of fine old burleys. Perhaps you'd like to try before you buy. Then just write to Larus & Bro. Co., 105 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va., and you'll get a free sample packet of Edgeworth.

Scintillating Events Vie for Honors In Imposing Array of Gay Functions

Junior Prom Heads List of Coming Events; Glee Clubs Score

And now, ladies and gentlemen, we have a Junior Prom. Other events may glitter and glisten in a gallant attempt to capture the festive crown, but "Junior Prom" is a name with a magic all its own. So, we are going to have a Junior Prom. Saturday night at the Shoreham, Barne will lift his baton and the music of Maxim Lowe's orchestra will float out over 58 radio stations as the juniors and their friends take the floor.

W. A. A. Names Sport Managers

Hedges, McCullough, Loveless, Crane Named Managers for Fall Sports

Elections for fall and winter sports managers were held last Thursday, May 4, by the Women's Athletic Association. Florence Hedges was elected hockey manager; Annabelle McCullough, soccer; Mildred Loveless, volleyball, and Catherine Crane, basketball. Elections for rifle managers will be held Tuesday, May 9, at 7 o'clock, in W-10 following the W. A. A. meeting because a quorum was not present to make the first election valid.

Florence Hedges has been manager of hockey for the past season and holds a manager's letter and a minor letter in that sport. Annabelle McCullough served as rifle manager in 1930-31 and holds a minor letter and numerals in rifle. Mildred Loveless played on the sophomore volleyball team this winter. Catherine Crane was manager of basketball for the past season and has been awarded major letters in both basketball and hockey.

The open season for garden parties, cocktail parties, and suppers is almost here. From 4 until 10 is probably the hardest time of day out of the 24—or 36—or whatever you're good for—to know what to wear. The length of one's skirt and gloves and the size of one's hat can hardly be decided upon without an international conference, and it seems that only an international consortium could afford to buy what a slip young thing is expected to have.

Suppose you are going to a very special tea and you want to look very special. You might wear the black chiffon I saw at Nancy Carter's on Connecticut avenue. It was ankle length, had a dusty pink top and short, full sleeves, and flowers of dusty pink and blue. With it you would wear a black picture hat, with pink and blue flowers, pink eight-button kid gloves, crushed, you know, and carry a small black crepe bag. Then that night, suppose you are going to dinner at the Racquet Club, or maybe to the Shoreham Terrace. You would wear the same gown, but, instead of a large hat, you'd wear a small tilted one with a veil, black gloves and add a couple of rhinestone bracelets. If you wanted a wrap, a knee-length velvet coat would be snug and smart.

But now suppose you weren't going to tea or dinner at all, but to a garden party and later to the Michel. Then you'd probably want a dress like the one Billie Burke wore in the garden scene in "Christopher Strong," which you can get at Pasternak's (aside, second floor). It is of plaid organdy, has a high tailored neck and grosgrain belt and bow at throat, but the inevitable puffy sleeves are, for variety, long. With it you'd wear a yellow picture hat with a shallow crown and old-fashioned bouquet, white kid gloves, a little yellow crepe purse and yellow sandals. In the evening you'd change to a small black hat again, probably with yellow flowers, black gloves, attach the rhinestones, and you will dance confidently all evening.

Another dress at Pasternak's was a three-purpose dress. It was of mouseline, the color of lime ice. In its little cape, which buttoned down the front, it could go to tea or Michel, and with the cape removed, it was formal enough to wear to the Yacht Club dance—had those very narrow straps which make one look so wayward.

So the idea is to change the accessories worn with one dress and wear it lots of places—do I make myself clear? And, my, what a lot of money you won't spend—maybe.

opera singer with a yen for handsome young authors. Aspiring to Amalia's or any other girl's affections will be Don Juan played by Grant Van Demark. Ludwig Caminita cavorts through the lines of Guillermo, Senor De Cordoba's able and efficient valet.

Lusby Designs Set
The setting for the play has been completely designed by Newell Lusby, who designed the Cue and Curtain's last production, "Cock Robin." Not being satisfied with merely designing the set, Lusby has, with the assistance of but two other members of the club, Karl Gay and Tom Toner, constructed the entire piece. One of the principal features of the charm of "The Romantic Young Lady" are the scenic potentialities possible in the designing of the set.

Over WMAL Wednesday
On Wednesday evening at 8:30 the Cue and Curtain will go on the air through the medium of WMAL. "Radio Joe" of D. J. Kaufman and Sons has kindly consented to give his time and entertainment facilities to the dramatic organization for that night. In addition to the usual program presented by "Radio Joe" there will be a skit by members of Cue and Curtain and possibly songs by members of the Troubadours.

This Radio program will be heard an hour and forty-five minutes before the curtain rises on the first bona fide performance of "The Romantic Young Lady" at Wardman Park Theatre. Seats are selling at $1.00 and $.75 and they may be obtained at either the Cue and Curtain office on the top floor of Building M or at the Bursar's office. Duets may also be purchased from Karl Gay, business manager of the production. As only 100 seats were reserved to sell at $1.00, there are plenty of the cheaper seats still available.

Dr. Schmidt to Talk Before Schoenfeld Deutsche Verein

Dr. Alfred Schmidt, of the division of library science, will be the speaker at the final meeting of the Schoenfeld Deutsche Verein, Friday, May 12, at 8 p. m. in the Chi Omega rooms. He is planning to speak on "Homes and Hears of the German Musicians and Poets."

Buell, Segal Win Cue and Curtain Limerick Contest

After puzzling an hour and a half over the various entries in the Cue and Curtain limerick contest staged in conjunction with its latest production, "The Romantic Young Lady," the judges finally awarded the two prizes to Stanley M. Segal and Alice Buell.

In addition to the bona fide awards made to Segal and Miss Buell, the judges decided to make two honorable mentions. The mentions go to Alan N. Willson and E. A. Shea.

Winners may obtain their tickets at the Cue and Curtain office on the top floor of building M.

The prize-winning limericks are printed below:

Dick Powell and June Carr, screen and radio stars who will appear at the Earle Theatre next week, have been invited to attend the prom. Conversations with the Earle management indicate that the two stars will arrive following their stage appearance Saturday night. Through the cooperation of Loew's Fox, it is expected that Will Mahoney, Earl Carroll's Vanities star, will also make a personal appearance at this time.

An interesting feature of the evening will be the arrival of the loser of the freshman-sophomore class struggle, to be held at Dean Wilbur Day. The president of the losing class will present himself at the prom in overalls, according to a joint agreement made between representatives of the two classes.

Invitations to the prom are $2, stag or drag. They may be procured at the Junior Prom Office (basement Building N); the business office, or at booths on campus and Corcoran Hall.
